WADLEY.

THE GREAT RAILROAD KING OF GEORGIA.

The Unveiling of the Monument to the Memory of the Late William M. Wadley, President of the Central Railroad—Over Five Thousand People Present—A Fine Tribute.

MACON, GA., June 18.—[Special.]—The exercises attending the unveiling of the Wadley monument dwarfed all other matters of the day. A beautifully classed room for complaint on the part of weather, and the people of Macon made the occasion to turn out in full force. To a great extent, the merchants closed their stores between the hours of ten and two, thus permitting their employees to witness the ceremonies.

THE CROWD.

It was immense. It was estimated that besides an overwhelming number of Macon people, fully three thousand strangers were present. As early as nine o'clock this morning, many had gathered at the intersection of Mulberry and Third streets, anxiously awaiting the beginning of the day's programme. It was a good hour before the crowd was a sober crowd, up to two o'clock, not a single arrest, for any cause, was reported at police barracks. Many of the employees of the Central system of roads arrived in the city early this morning, including representatives from every branch of service. Most of these were accompanied by their wives and children, who amused themselves until the hour for the commencement of the programme arrived, by inspecting the various points of interest in the city.

AMONG THE VICTIMS.

were the following: Mr. R. S. Ridder, of New Orleans; Messrs. J. W. McCall, M. D. McArthur, E. E. McCall, and Mrs. W. D. Mitchell, of Atlanta; Mr. R. J. Courtney, Miss Courtney, W. R. Cotterwood and son, W. G. Raoul and family, H. C. Boggs, Wm. H. Gordon, W. W. Starr, G. A. Whitehead, Wm. Rogers, D. D. Arden, A. R. Lawton, and W. F. Shelman and wife, of Savannah; J. M. Smith, of Dawson; Robert Cushing of New York; J. H. Pugh, J. D. Adams and son, G. M. Williams, C. D. Hunt, E. H. Epping, J. M. Frazer, D. E. Williams, H. M. Howard, G. W. Briggs, W. H. Brannon, W. Brown and John Peabody, of Columbus; F. Sanford of Montgomery, Ala.; Mrs. W. M. Wadley, Miss O. S. Wadley, Mrs. E. Wadley, Living with her family at Birmingham; Mr. L. C. McCall, of Jeffersonville; T. Gilmer of Sanderville; W. W. Fitts, W. W. Merrill, L. C. Manderville, of Carrollton; S. H. Griswold, of Clinton; Robert Saussy, of New York; J. M. Fonder of Forsyth; Thomas W. Bannon and wife, of Bolingbrook; W. E. Collier, of Fort Valley; many already mentioned in The Constitution as being present, and hundreds of prominent gentlemen whose names could not be obtained.

THE LATE COLONEL W. M. WADLEY, in whose honor the monument was erected, was born at Brentwood, New Hampshire, in 1813. He was reared a blacksmith, and removed to Georgia in 1835. While a pupil in the school, he was engaged in blacksmithing, and was married in 1840 to Miss Rebecca Birmingham, the daughter of the officer who had been in charge of the fort. He died immediately after his marriage to build the bridge over the Oconee river for the Central railroad company. On the road being completed to Macon, 1843, he was made roadmaster, having charge of the construction of bridges, etc. In 1849 he was made general superintendent.

In 1852 Colonel Wadley took charge of the State road as superintendent, and distinguished himself by bringing that road into proper working order. In 1855 he was recalled to the management of the Central railroad, on which he remained until 1861.

LOVE IN ATHENS.

SENSATIONAL ELOPEMENT IN THE CLASSIC CITY.

Miss Rowland, of Savannah, and Mr. Woodin, of Athens, take a trip to Watkinsville, where Rev. Mr. Morris makes them husband and wife—other state news.

ATHENS, GA., June 18.—[Special.]—A sensational elopement occurred in Athens to-day. Among the young ladies who have visited Athens during the past year was Miss Nella Rowland, of Savannah. She was a relative of Mr. Tim Barnard, who married a daughter of Professor Woodin, of the university. She frequently visited Prof. Woodin's house, as the guest of his daughters, and spent with them the Christmas holidays. Here she met Mr. George Woodin, of the professors, and a son of love at first sight. The young man is a graduate of the class of 1882 and now occupies a responsible place with the Northeastern railroad. Until to-day both quietly awaited the demon which had resulted so happy to both parties. The college exercises closed yesterday and among the happy young ladies who turned their faces homeward was Miss Rowland. She was accompanied by Miss Woodin, whom her mother had given her carte blanche to visit. Instead of going to the depot they were met by young Mr. Woodin and Mr. Basil Cobb, and the four armed with a license, went in a carriage to the residence of Miss Girls, Miss L. Patterson and E. Harris.

The baccalaureate address was a most appropriate one.

To-night the chapel is densely packed with friends of the college to greet the young ladies in their musical entertainment.

The following is the programme:

1. Chorus, welcome, The Freshman class.

have been familiar for a number of years with general character of Prof. Horsford's phosphate preparations. Recent examinations made of the "Acid Phosphate" and "Bread Preparation" show them to be exactly what is claimed for them in the circulars accompanying the use. The "Acid Phosphate" is a concentration in water of Acid Phosphate of Lime,

"Bread Preparation" is a mix-of Acid Phosphate of Lime, lime, salt of lime and soda. When mixed with carbonated soda it is liberated and a double phosphate of lime and soda is and remains in the when baked. In ordinary cream or tea powders the substance left in the bread

"raising" is rochelle salts—a double nitrate of lime and soda.

The phosphates are used substances in animal nutrition and the tannates are not.

My opinion the Phosphate Powder is, there-preferable to the others, so far as healthfulness is concerned.

"Feel So Well."

"I want to thank you for telling me of Dr.

Horsford's "Favorable Prescription," writes a lady to her friend. "For a long time I was unfit to attend to the work of my household. I kept about, but I felt thoroughly miserable. I had terrible back-saches, and bearing-down sensations across me and was quite weak and discouraged. I sent and got some of the medicine after receiving your letter, and it has healed me. I hardly know myself. I feel so well."

Wednesday night two negro women got off the train at Brown's crossing on the Georgia railroad, and went into the grist mill and the office of Mr.

D. W. Brown. They were armed with pipes and about twelve of them, and caught fire and was totally consumed. It is reported that the fire originated from the sparks falling from the workmen's clothes into some trash. The loss is about $2000. The building was not insured.

ANOTHER terrible mining casualty has occurred in England. By some accident several hundred miners were imprisoned. Many were rescued, but probably one hundred have been killed.

The cholera in Spain has assumed fearful proportions, and is now ravaging all parts of the country. In Madrid the disease has been declared a pandemic. Against this declaration the merchants have protested, because of the damage to trade.

The Italian ministry, anxious to keep pace with events in England, has also resigned, and precipitated upon Italy a ministerial crisis. The premier was not satisfied with the small majority obtained on the budget and hence resigned.

In another column will be found a notice for meeting of the subscribers to the Y. M. C. A. building fund. At this meeting important business will be transacted, a board of trustees selected and the work of erecting this beautiful home for our young men earnestly inaugurated.

The mayor of New Orleans and a committee of the city council went to Philadelphia as an escort to the liberty bell. They were dined in Philadelphia at the almshouse. This was as much as the committee could expect, since it was enjoined from splurging on the five thousand dollars appropriated by the city council.

NO MORE SUBSIDIES.

Men like Mr. John Roach are probably convinced that the country no longer has a subsidy administration; for a case in point has come up and been decided against the jobbers. It arose in this way: The jobbers when beaten in an open fight, slipped a clause, appropriating $400,000, in the discretion of the postmaster-general, for distribution among American steamship companies carrying the mails, in the postoffice appropriation bill. The bill was reported altogether too late in the session anyway, and when it did come up for final action members had to choose between the subsidy clause and the failure of the entire bill, which would have necessitated an extra session.

The subsidy clause was therefore retained; but the postmaster-general has decided not to use the money placed at his disposal. He finds a precedent for his decision in the action of General Grant in relation to a river and harbor grab that was log-rolled through congress. General Grant refused to take the steps to make the money available. It was left in the treasury, where the president and the postmaster-general propose to permit the $400,000 to remain.

Mr. Vilas bases his excellent and wholly admirable decision upon well known facts. It is not necessary, he says, to expend the money in order to secure the ocean mail service required. He thinks the present compensation is high enough, and that if the money were distributed as the bill suggests it would be insufficient to secure more or better service. He does not think the Pacific mail steamship company is entitled to all or the largest part of the sum, and a distribution to all the companies interested be considered altogether injudicious. It would simply be a waste, or gift of so much money, with no returning benefit. It is not claimed that the steamship companies are not well paid at present; it is simply claimed that because the steamships are owned in this country they should have a slice of the people's money as a gift or gratuity. The gift business has been overdone, and Mr. Vilas is entitled to the thanks of the country for calling a halt at the very outset of the new administration. It is safe to say there will be no more subsidies while Mr. Cleveland is president.

The contracts with the steamship companies expire on the first of next month, and they threaten, it is reported, to strike unless the postmaster-general hands over the sum in question to them. They will surely attempt to carry out such a threat while Mr. Cleveland is in office. He is the wretched man to work a full-blown scheme upon, and the steamship owners will be apt to think twice before they endeavor to conquer him in that way. We trust the postmaster-general will give them every chance to inaugurate the proposed scheme, if they are so minded. It would certainly yield considerable fun and news during the midsummer dullness, while it would do no harm in any direction. Gratitude and boldness would, in such a trial, go down together, and the president and postmaster-general would have not only the people, but enemies, unmistakeably and definitely behind them.

ABOUT ENSILAGE.

The farmers of the north are still experimenting with the silo. Those who take a scientific interest in their business are enthusiastic advocates of the silo. Others, again, not so learned, but equally as successful, are not satisfied with their experiments. Some experiments have been made in the south, and some of them have been very satisfactory, but it is impossible to give any idea of the general result.

In France, where the idea of the modern silo originated, there is not that interest in the subject that one might assume, and even in England ensilage is still in the experimental stage. In New England, dairy farmers who have no silos and, consequently, no ensilage, are as successful as their neighbors who have the advantage of ensilage. This fact is not an argument against ensilage, the probability being that a silo would be of great benefit to a farmer who lacks some of the requisites of close and economical management.

Professor Goessman, director of the Massachusetts experimental station, says that it is "apparent that a too exclusive feeding of corn ensilage affects seriously the general condition of the animal." This is one man's opinion, based on the results of one man's experiments, and is important only as it shall be supported by the results of other experiments. The truth is, one man's success with ensilage is not another man's success, the same or similar differences characterize the results of all human endeavor.

Those who insist on copious doses of Latin and Greek as the prerequisites of culture will, no doubt, be astonished to hear that Professor Blackie, of Edinburgh, himself one of the most accomplished Greek scholars in Europe, does not sympathize with them. The distinguished professor is entitled to speak with some degree of authority, for his experience with young men covers a period of nearly two generations.

Professor Blackie says that a young man proposing to enter any of the professions should have a knowledge of Greek and Latin because they are the languages of scientific terminology; but he thinks that a bright youth ought to get enough in six months to last a great share of the burden of government or that any other person or class of persons were exempt, for by the nature of things all persons are compelled to use real estate in the production and distribution of portable things, which constitutes the whole business of the people. There being no arbitrary tax levied upon portable things or personal property the production and distribution of the same would be stimulated and encouraged, thereby giving increased employment to the people and fresh impulse to trade. All persons and corporations would be compelled to use real estate in business affairs. Further, with no arbitrary tax levied upon the loan of money to impede its circulation, it would flow freely through every channel of business, stimulating, vitalizing the energies of all the people in their efforts for support. There would be no arbitrary tax levied upon credits or evidences of debt to disturb the normal rate of interest, and a fictitious enhanced rate could not be established or maintained, and the price for the use of money would be determined by the nature of things—i.e., the actual demand and supply, giving those who borrow money and those who loan money equal footing in business affairs. Those who loan money do not directly participate in the business and therefore those to whom they lend are entitled to a fair rate of interest at the time of loan.

The Ohio saloon keepers will not recover the $200,000 taxes paid under the Scott law.

SENATOR VANCE is recovering from an operation for the removal of a tumor from his neck.

DYSART RICHARD SHOOTER, who attempted to "remove" Captain Phelan, has married Miss Kate Dwyer, sister of a well-known Irish "man of action."

OUR 182 votes cast in the Massachusetts on the bill providing for temperature instruction in the public schools only one vote was cast against it.

The Daily States, of New Orleans, estimates that the exposition just closed brought $20,000,000 in the city, and predicts that next year it will bring $40,000,000.

One of the first difficulties the new British cabinet will have to deal with is a big deficit. All Mr. Gladstone, foxy, grand old man that he is, left the hole.

The hansom is now the most popular vehicle in New York, and it is especially popular among women. Many fashionable ladies use it to go and come from church.

THE thirty-fourth legislative district in Illinois, which elected a republican to the legislature at a special election recently, gave a democratic majority of 2,282 at the judicial election last week.

MASSACHUSETTS, Vermont, New Jersey, Iowa, Virginia and Mississippi have established the system of allowing legislators mileage, and it is said the use of free passes is no more common than in the other states.

The most effective and greatest of English premiers have been Robert Walpole, with twenty-five years of service, William Pitt, with nearly twenty years, and William Ewart Gladstone, with more than ten years.

THE lawyers in the Marie-Garrison law suit were paid over $600,000. Melville Day, besides a large salary for eight years, received $100,000, Judge Constock of Syracuse, $75,000, and Roscoe Conkling $600.

THE report that Bartholdi is on his way from France to America is not true. The artist and his wife did embark at Rouen on the bark Ise, but they left the transport when she was off Canada, and so were on the bark of the Seine, a few miles above Havre.

WILLIAM HENRY HUBBET, formerly of the New York Herald and World, has associated himself with John R. McLean, of the Cincinnati Enquirer, and together they have purchased the plant of the New York Star. Until lately John H. Hubbard, a New York daily will at once be issued by the new firm.

Mr. Charles V. MERIDEN, the young lawyer who conducted the prosecution of Claverius at Richmond, Va., with so much ability, has written a letter declining to receive any compensation for his services. He went into the prosecution at the request of Commonwealth Attorney Witt, who is still to trial Claverius.

ONE of the men spoken of as a probable member of the British cabinet is an American with another son who was recently married to an American lady. Randolph Churchill's wife was Miss Jerome, of New York, and the son of Sir George Northcote is the husband of ex-Secretary Hamilton's daughter Edith.

Always wanting what it's not,

Never liking what it's got,

SECRETARY WHITNEY's New York house is a fine building, really a small palace, which formerly belonged to a wealthy woman who left her husband and ran off to France with the prince of Talleyrand-Perigord, causing a grievous scandal. She has back orders to sell the place, and it was bought by Mr. George Peabody, of Boston, for $700,000.

THE Cunard steamer Oregon, which is now armed as a swift cruiser, will be the flagship of Admiral Hosking during the forthcoming manœuvres of war ships in Bantry Bay. Beside her ten gunboats, she carries six 120-pounder-loading 64-pounder guns, capable of being effectively used as torpedo boats. She will also receive several Gatling guns.

VICTOR Hugo, though the son of sceptical parents, had Catholic and even monastic connections, for his wife, a nun, complained that he was a profligate. He was a member of the same community, as also a third cousin still living. On the father's side there is a cousin of the same name at Tuile, and one of his brothers is at home on the eve of entering the priesthood.
